

FOLLOWERS OF COX ATTEMPT STAMPEDE

halled with a joyous bark by the friends of the Ohio Governor.

As the thirteenth ballot begins at 3:03 P. M. it is evident that the Cox people are striving for victory now if ever. Cox can make no gain in Illinois, which still gives fourteen to McAdoo. Indiana is tangled up and is passed. Iowa goes to Cox again under the hated unit rule, and the voting is continued a while with little change.

The Palmer managers still profess hope that they have a chance. They are hanging on and say they will continue to do so for some time. The way the little candidates stick indicates the opinion of some State leaders that the McAdoo-Palmer-Cox deadlock cannot be broken. Every one of them hopes his man will then be the choice of the convention. This is why the few Owen votes hang on so persistently and why West Virginia votes for Davis. Ballot after ballot, and Virginia still embraces Glass. New York distributes her vote in the usual way.

The routine of announcement goes on. Now and then there is a tremor of applause as a slight change is announced. Charles F. Murphy goes over to the Iowa delegation and congratulates Wilbur Marsh on the upholding of the unit rule. McAdoo picks up a vote or two from Indiana when her vote is finally made known. Cox also gains a few in Missouri. The Missouri chairman purposely calls McAdoo's name "Mick-a-doo" and turns to his delegation and laughs as he does it.

The organ is bellowing "Oe the Banks of the Wabash." Maybe this will help Marshall's chances. The organ goes on grandly and Uda Waldrop is some organist, we'll say. A delegate asks that the clutter of ushers be thrown out of the aisle so the convention can see its chairman, but Senator Robinson says he cannot sanction physical violence. The result of the thirteenth ballot was announced by Senator Robinson at 3:35 P. M. Cox retains his lead with 428½, a gain of 24½. McAdoo has 363½, a falling of 11½. Nothing serious yet, Palmer seems to be slowly fading, having 193½.

Field Narrows to Nine.

The field narrows to nine men. Delegates and visitors are hoping that a settlement is near. Gerard drops out. Illinois and Indiana repeat their vote. No change. It is evident that this ballot will be indeterminate.

The Cox managers are working frantically with the Palmer people, trying to hope in that great block of Pennsylvania votes, but they still resist. And even if Cox got all Palmer's vote at this stage the total would not be enough to nominate. The Pennsylvania vote is a hard one to crack. The report is that fifty or sixty of the delegates want to go from Palmer to McAdoo, which is the reason they are not being released by the Palmer managers.

"The Sidewalks of New York" on the organ starts the crowd to singing while waiting for the count.

The result of the fourteenth ballot is announced at 3:45 o'clock.

Cox's impetus carries him up 15 votes more, to 443½. McAdoo, standing grimly, loses 5 votes only and is 358½. Palmer drops 11½ votes and is now 182. The band is playing "Ohio" and the Cox people, thoroughly realizing the critical stage in their candidate's position, are again, with a procession of standards and much vocal excitement, trying to rush the Convention into line. Taggart says Cox must get somewhere near 500 votes in the next two ballots or give up. He declares that Pat Harrison is holding Mississippi only by the hair of his head and that Georgia wants to leave Palmer for McAdoo. Robert M. Woolfe, one of the McAdoo people, says their lines will hold fast. Certainly the wets, the bosses and all of the elements hostile to McAdoo are giving Cox a grand run for his money. If he fails of nomination for President it is easy to see from this distance that he may be the candidate for Vice President.

A battery of three college cheer leaders, white shirted, wearing summery caps, one of them with a cane and the in his hand, are earning their money as they labor in front of the Iowa delegation to put Cox over. But once more, the majority of states all unimpressed, mere spectators.

An attempt to start a parade of banners comes to nothing.

The call for the fifteenth ballot is made at 3:57 o'clock, after Senator Robinson succeeds in clearing the aisle and the spotlight is turned off the college boys. As the vote begins to come in Alabama is unchanged. The chairman of the Arizona delegation gives one to McAdoo and then says the rest, five, go to "that grand leader whom we will crown as the King of—" and what he is saying we shall never know because of confusion of applause, laughter and jeering that storms over the crowd. Cox got the five votes. Georgia cleaves to Palmer with her twenty-eight. Cox loses two in Illinois, Palmer gains two and McAdoo keeps his fourteen.

Tennessee for Davis.

Taggart, in a last effort, it may be, to do his part in the "bosses' combination" for Cox, throws all of Indiana's thirty to the Ohioan, a Cox gain of ten. A roar for this. McAdoo gains slightly in Missouri among the small changes down the line of States. Cox finally gets a vote in Nebraska, the State of the bone dry Bryan, but also of the dappled Hitchcock.

Bryan, by the way, is not here. His alternate is sitting. New Jersey now gives all of her twenty-eight votes to Cox, McAdoo losing three. In New York McAdoo's seventeen hold fast, as to Cox's seventy-three. North Carolina is rock solid twenty-four for McAdoo. The home State, Ohio, drops forty-eight votes for that same old Cox and Pennsylvania reverts with "the same old Palmer, seventy-three."

The fifteenth ballot is ended at 4:14 P. M.

In the wait for the result Murphy again stands in the aisle, sweeping the convention with his appraising glance. He is the least excited man in the hall. The result comes at 4:20 P. M.

The roll call for the sixteenth ballot starts at 4:20 P. M. As it stands now Cox is up to 468½, a further gain of 25. McAdoo is down to 344½, a loss of eleven, and Palmer has dropped to 187. Marshall is out of the competition unless Taggart can put him back in. New York's six McAdoo delegates are pleading with Georgia to leave Palmer for McAdoo.

William Allen White, observing the mechanics of it all, says the McAdoo strength is holding well despite a few defections, and that the one big attempt to put McAdoo over will be made to-night sometime.

Cox gains two more votes in Nebraska, now having three. New Hampshire raises its McAdoo vote to six. Band and organ have ceased. No sound is heard save the murmur of delegates. Occasionally somebody whistles a ratchet, but most of the crowd is silent, weary, but still keyed to a high pitch of excitement by the closeness of the race and the prospects remote though it may be that one of the contenders may be pock-eted.

Taggart Makes Shift.

Tennessee at last tries to start a stampede for Ambassador Davis by call-
